This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Some call Ezra's grandmother a nuisance; others celebrate her as a hero. An eightysomething Holocaust survivor, Chava has dedicated her entire life to helping others—or causing trouble, depending on who's telling the story.

Ezra, embarrassed by his bumbling corporate-lawyer dad and drunk trophy wife of a mom, decides to join his bubby on her next do-gooder crusade. But a couple of days before a protest to save their neighbors from eviction, Chava announces her intentions to undergo “youth surgery,” a dubious procedure meant to literally reverse one's physical age. As his parents try to talk her out of it, the precocious teen ponders whether his grandmother is really willing to give up all that she's built—including their intergenerational alliance—to recapture her stolen youth.

Told through the perspective of a cynical, perceptive young man, Questions I Don't Ask Bubby is the story of a woman who has created a life after an unspeakable trauma, and the family that both loves her and cannot understand.
