Jimmy Durante, a.k.a. Schnozzola, remains one of America's greatest and most beloved comedians. Instantly recognizable with his giant nose (insured for one million dollars by Lloyd's of London), penguin strut, and a gravel voice that sputtered some of the funniest and most fractured sentences ever heard in English, Durante captivated three generations of Americans—from New York club audiences to the millions who heard his trademark TV sign-off, "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are!" The son of an Italian immigrant who ran a Lower East Side barbershop, Durante quit school in the seventh grade and took up the piano. His father hoped he would become a concert pianist, but Jimmy was soon pounding honky-tonk at Diamond Tony's, a Coney Island dive where Eddie Cantor waited tables and "da hours were from eight to unconscious." From there he went on to work almost every venue and gig in the show biz world, from speakeasies and night clubs to Broadway, Hollywood, radio, and television, and a singular meeting of the minds that had him playing a piano-violin duet with none other than Albert Einstein. Inka Dinka Doo is a fine portrait of one of the most beloved comic talents of our time.
